Streamlining standards for textiles by Sigrid Tornquist
Hundreds, if not thousands, of standards affect the specialty textiles industry, and keeping up with them is time consuming and expensive. As representatives from the industry work to revise existing standards they also share a second goal: to create a more streamlined approach. Read more

Testing ... testing
by Janet Preus
As much as the industry agrees standards are critical, everybody would like to see fewer of them. The challenge is agreeing on how to consolidate. This will take time, but I'm glad to report that there is progress. The move toward simplification is complex, and a measured and deliberate approach makes sense. Read more
